“Light to Lead the Way: A Daily Devotional for Teen Mothers”

Now Available from Teen Mother Choices International

CHICAGO (Oct. 24, 2011) – Providing practical encouragement and everyday support, “Light to Lead the Way,” a new devotional from Chicago area-based Teen Mother Choices International, addresses daily struggles teen mothers face on their journey to adulthood and independence.

The 366-day guidebook features six days of devotionals and a reflection on the seventh day. Inspirational entries are written by TMCInternational volunteers and staff – all with nearly 25 years of service to teen mothers and their children. Some were once teen mothers themselves. A Bible passage begins each day’s devotion, illustrating that God’s Word has something to say about every area of daily living. Five specific life roles of a teen mother are addressed: teenager, mother, student, employee and seeker.

“‘Light to Lead the Way’ is perfect for teen mothers to use personally or by anyone working with teen mothers in a group setting,” says Christa March, editor of the devotional and founder, TMCInternational. “Every struggle a teen mother faces is addressed in the Bible. Through the devotional’s concise readings and reflections, she has the opportunity to hear what the Bible says to her about everyday living, and to confidently put into practice the decisions she must make for herself and her child.”

March is founder of Teen Mother Choices, Inc., a ministry begun in 1989 to provide the resources most teen mothers lack, and to support them in becoming self-sufficient. She formed TMCInternational in 2007, to expand the scope of her work by training churches and other organizations to serve teen mothers in their communities.

Today, the ministry supports programs operating in Florida, Illinois, Missouri and Texas. More than six organizations in five states are in various phases of training, while TMCInternational receives inquiries about its programs daily from around the world. A new initiative – Operation Education – is empowering teen mothers to help them complete their general education requirements and graduate high school.

“I am ecstatic that the founder of Teen Mother Choices wrote a devotional book just for teen moms,” says a former member. “I love the inspirational and uplifting words that get me going first thing every day. I think many will relate to this book and will benefit from it being at their bedside to refer to every day.”

“Light to Lead the Way: A Daily Devotional for Teen Mothers” is published by Xulon Press. The 5.5-inch by 8.5-inch devotional is sold as paperback and contains 414 pages. For purchasing information, please visit xulonpress.com or amazon.com.
